The Mission Field:

I am helping the Nepali church in equipping, mentoring and empowering leaders of different denominations here in Nepal. I see this as a great need for those leaders who cannot go for their theological studies. Our churches have been ineffective in reaching the unreached people groups. The Lord has kept me in a very strategical position to cast the vision of training Great Commission leaders so that someday we can see more indigenous churches in the country.

My Mission Calling:

My mission is to reach and train "great-commission" leaders.

My Role:

Train, mentor, coach, and equip leaders for mission.

My Story:

I am Milan Kumar Magar from Nepal. I was born and raised in a mixed Hindu and Buddhist family. I also remember growing up in a broken family. During my time in high school, I got involved in bad company and that led me to becoming an active member in a gang of Manangi in Thamel Kathmandu. My role was to collect money from businessmen in the Thamel areas. I had the habit of using alcohol, cigarettes and drugs. Due to my lifestyle, I was incarcerated several times.

One day I was invited by my father to his house and where his friend shared the gospel to me. There, I prayed the "sinner's prayer." Gradually, I left my gang members. I felt I was welcomed back by the society and relatives. I started to receive love and care from the Christians. I found peace, care and love which I had been longing for for several years. This led me to love Christ more and more and slowly I began to experience transformation in my inner being.
