Mission Training

The Mission Field:

I am helping the Nepali church in equipping, mentoring and empowering leaders of different denominations here in Nepal. I see this as a great need for those leaders who cannot go for their theological studies. Our churches have been ineffective in reaching the unreached people groups. The Lord has kept me in a very strategical position to cast the vision of training Great Commission leaders so that someday we can see more indigenous churches in the country.

My Mission Calling:

My mission is to reach and train “great-commission” leaders.

My Role:

Train, mentor, coach, and equip leaders for mission.

My Story:

I am Milan Kumar Magar from Nepal. I was born and raised in a mixed Hindu and Buddhist family. I also remember growing up in a broken family. During my time in high school, I got involved in bad company and that led me to becoming an active member in a gang of Manangi in Thamel Kathmandu. My role was to collect money from businessmen in the Thamel areas. I had the habit of using alcohol, cigarettes and drugs. Due to my lifestyle, I was incarcerated several times.

One day I was invited by my father to his house and where his friend shared the gospel to me. There, I prayed the “sinner’s prayer.” Gradually, I left my gang members. I felt I was welcomed back by the society and relatives. I started to receive love and care from the Christians. I found peace, care and love which I had been longing for for several years. This led me to love Christ more and more and slowly I began to experience transformation in my inner being.

Mission Training

The Mission Field:

The Lord has given me the burden of training, empowering and mentoring women and also mentoring leaders couples. Women are treated as secondary class being in a country. They are hidden inside the house in the context of villages and small town of Nepal. Men have lost their sight of seeing diamond in a wife. So, they are treated as a useless being. But, the Lord gave me burden to bring that diamond to shine in family, churches, and society. Many women are depressed and filled with bitterness. That tempts them to suicide or run away from their families. But, the Lord has helped me to meet, train and counsel to that kind of ladies and help them to restore their lives.

The Christian leaders family has been under attack by Satan. Christian families are in great danger of losing its holy relationship and the great plan of God in their marriages and raising family. The Lord has been using his tools to mentor and counsel the leaders couples along with my husband from the past 2 years.

My Mission Calling:

To teach and train and empower and mentor Women and couples to transform the their homes and churches and the nation.

My Role:

Bible teacher, mentor and counsellor.

My Story:

Just after my conversion, I went to discipleship training for 3 months in my place. One night, a pastor was challenging to go for God 's mission. And when I heard that preaching, I felt that God is calling me to serve Him. I was eventually sent by our church to go as a missionary to different places in Myanmar. I was so delighted to share the gospel with different people and in different culture in the midst of trails and problems. I saw that people need to know Christ personally and they need to grow in Faith too. Later, I felt that I need long term theological training and God opened the door for me to study in Bangalore to do my Master of Divinity from 2003 -2006.

I met my husband in Bible college .We prayed together to seek God's will for our marriage and serve God together for the future ministry. God time was perfect and after 3 years of our prayer, we got married in 2007. When I reached Nepal it was very hard for me to adjust with culture, food, language and place. But I remembered my prayer and commitment with God. My prayer and commitment for the Lord was to follow Him wherever He leads for His glory and Kingdom. God gave me opportunity to help my husband ministry. We both started to teach in training Centre and help in seminars of LTD/NCFN. Today, the Lord has extended my ministry fields. I am more actively involved in mentoring and counseling the women and leaders couples.
